Notes

Catharina Joris Rapalje, and Catharina Jeronymos are listed as joining the Brooklyn Reformed Church from "The Mannhattans."

The Dutch tended toward phonetic spellings: a result of which is "Tricaud" replaced by "Trico". One reference gives Catelina's name as "Frisco", but this is felt to be an error. DeBoer's research led him to believe both Joris and Catelina were from families of weavers, and there is a "Trico cloth", a sort of soft ribbed fabric which is supposedly named after her family's skill. Catelina herself claimed to have been a Parisienne, so may have been a daughter of Dr. Tricault, a physician in Paris during the time of her birth. {NO NO NO - not born in Paris} [Reference 64]

The Labadists Danckerts and Sluyter recorded their interview with Catalyntje in their journal (30 May 1680), stating she was "an old aunt of De La Grange, an old Walloon woman from Valenciennes, seventy-four years old". Catalyntje made two official declarations of her coming over to Nieuw Nederlandt in 1624. Dated 14 February 1685 and 17 October 1688, they have been placed in the office of the Secretary of State at Albany, New York. [Reference 99]
